

Kaine Sworn Into 119th Congress

Washington, D.C. – U.S. Senator Tim Kaine (D-VA) released the following statement after being sworn into the 119th United States Congress:

“I’m so grateful for the opportunity to serve Virginians for another six years. I’m proud of what we’ve done so far to lower health care costs, rebuild our nation’s infrastructure, protect our national security, and grow our economy by bringing new investments to Virginia. I look forward to building on this progress together. I know that for many Virginians, the new Administration brings uncertainty and even fear, but I will always fight to build a brighter future for all Americans—no matter who you are, who you love, what you look like, how you worship, or what your economic status is. I’m excited to continue traveling across the Commonwealth and working together to strengthen our economy by lowering costs, expanding access to job training programs, and making it easier for families to access affordable child care. I will also keep seeking common ground to support Virginia’s servicemembers and meet our defense needs, and make progress on commonsense immigration reform, gun safety legislation, and more.”

In the 119th Congress, Kaine will continue to serve on the Senate Armed Services; Budget; Health, Education, Labor and Pensions; and Foreign Relations Committees.
